DEPEAUED-AND WHY? esterday, undertakes to account for he recent Waterloo defeat of the Democratic party. The reasons assigned may be summarized as follows:

1st. The calling of the Convention New York, so the boudholders could 2d. The admission of Belmont, the the prince of boudholders, as a dele-3d. The nomination of Seymour on a greenback platform.

Chairman of the National Democratic Committee,

Sth. The betrayal of the party in the management of the canyass by the Committee and other New York Democratic leaders, who wanted to save New York for the Democracy and at the same time secure the election of Grant, including in the measures to that end, 7th. The panic and stampeds brought about by their organ, the World, after the October elections.

The Besister finds no fault with the

the October elections.

The Register finds no fault with the principles of the party as embodied in the platform by Mr. Wade Hampton and other eminent rebels. It does not object to the doctrines of the Brodhead object to the doctrines of the Brodhead letter, but to the prominence given them in the canvass. It does not occur to that party may have occurred from popular trol of the Government; but that ca lamity is solely due, in the opinion of the Register to the treachery of "the the Register to the treachery of "the You boast that your triumph we New Yorkers," who "coolly sold the be the triumph of the "Lost Cause. of their own State; and every element "of defeat that was needed in addition "to the Brodhead letter and the altered on the public debt.

You propose to tax "every species o property" the poor man owns. through the mismanagement and the National Democracy." It would contemplation of the lovely pleture of time forbids. Having no share in the o rejoicings over his election; and it casts off now and forever the unfaith opelousas—these are your yictories.

This apparent now—and the Register's article helps prove it—that the Democratic party is divided by a yawning gulf. On the one side is the Tammany Democracy, flushed with the spoils of yictory and secretly chuckling over the election of Grant because they know it assures the prosperity of the country and makes the fruits of their yictory.

—Opelousas—these are your yictories.

The Register having left the bed and poard of Tammany, has but one refuge board of Tammany, has but one refuge and that is with the Hampton and Blair Democracy now led by the Biairs' organ, the Evening Express of Washington City, which declares they must "stick to their principles at all hazards." The fact that a republican meeting is to be held, in many of the States of the Union, is deemed by you of sufficient reason for shooting down those who attend your train. Debt and inxation are the fruits of your treason.

Reconstruction has been delayed by you. You would have no reorganization that did not place the old lash in your hands, and enable the masters to wreck yengeance on their late slaves.

The future you would give us is a future of terror. Civil war, business prostration and oppressive taxation are all you offer us.

na became sure. Messages from Grow, and Colfax declared that all doubt about these States was past. Every New England State was now certain: Michigan and California came into line, the Pacific coast responding to the Atlantic and the Lakes, and West Virginia, with an unexpectedly large majority, took her place, while Nevada and Nebraska reached across the Rocky Mountains, halling the Alleghenies. Bands of music saluted the victor from the streets; fireworks illuminated the neghborhood, and cannons announced the peaceful victory of Grant. But Grant was still as caim and impensivable as ever. His adherents were elated but bis equanimity was undisturbed. At length word was brought that North-Carolina was loyal once more, the first Southern State that had voted since the best attainable terms.

In our gloomiest days, and when no political campaign was pending, you sought to inflame the passions of the people against the only government we had, or could have.

You assailed President Lincoln as a despot.

You denounced to the country.

read, and Mr. Colfax and his step-father, with a few of his life-long friends from the days of his boyhood, among them J. H., Harper, C. M. Heaton, Wm. Miller, and Geo. Milburn, went to the depot, where three operators were soon at work receiving on six wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company the news that poured on him from all points of the Union, which was copied and sent down to the thronged Court. House. By 9 o'clock the fact that the triumph was even more overwhelming than had been anticipated was mannees, and by to ocice his townsmen insisted on his coming to the Court House to see how happy they felt. Arriving there the whole audience ross and gave vest to continued cheers, throwing up their hate' and repeating loud, and long, and it was with difficulty that order was restored, so that he could be heard in return for their enthusiastic congratulations. During his remarks he was frequently interrupted by most exuberant and rapturous applause. As soon as the protonged, repeated, and enthusiastic cheering was quieted down Mr. Colfax addressed them briefly in substance as follows: He said that their happy faces showed how joyous they were at the magnificent victory that had been won for the right to day, fut he could not but remember that there were others far happier. The sorallytried Union men of the South, subjected to outrage, to insult and to murdering assents.

for a life-time reposed in him, and for the earnestness with which they had rejoiced at his every success in life as if it had been to their own.

When he ceased speaking, there was a general rush for hand-shaking, and it was with preat difficulty that Mr. Colfax could free himself from the orowd so that he might return to the telegraph office, where returns were being received as fast as lightning could transmit them. During the evening, Mr. Washburne telegraphed for news from Indiana, and said General Grant was in his parlor enjoying the dispatches, and Mr. Colfax sent all the returns he had by towns and counties from this hard-fought State.

At midnight the returns are still pouring in, and the jubiant crowd at the Court House mixing in songs, and shouts, and speeches, and stories, and amusic in the intervals between the dispatches.
